Pam Douglas was a tireless and indominable champion for canine epilepsy research, raising funds as well as encouraging and assisting with sample and participant recruitment in the search for better diagnostics, treatments, and – someday – prevention of this awful, heartbreaking disease. No one knows the costs better than someone who shares their life with an epileptic dog, as Pam did with her beloved Toby. She formed a foundation in his name on behalf of all dogs with epilepsy and the people who love them. Pam's legacy can be found in the multitudes of people and epileptic dogs she has helped over the past two decades. May our breed be blessed with more people like her.

"When Toby's Foundation began there were no research grants for the Australian Shepherd and canine epilepsy research was not the priority it has become today since Toby's Foundation brought it to the forefront.

We have succeeded in raising canine epilepsy awareness! ... By eliminating this disease, we can save others from the tremendous toll it takes on our beloved dogs and the people who love them." -Pam Douglas
